

Exhibit 1

WESTLAW CLASSIC

2007 WL 2121995

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

United States District Court,

Wrack v. City of Detroit

United States District Court, E.D. Michigan, Southern Division. July 24, 2007 Not Reported in F.Supp.2d 2007 WL 2121995 (Approx. 7 pages)

Marcus WRACK, Plaintiff,

v.

CITY OF DETROIT, a municipal corporation, Michael Parish, and Michael Osman, Detroit Police Officers, Defendants.

No. 2:07-CV-12196.

July 24, 2007.

Attorneys and Law Firms

Kenneth D. Finegood, Kenneth D. Finegood Assoc., Southfield, MI, for Plaintiff.

OPINION AND ORDER DISMISSING PLAINTIFF'S STATE LAW CLAIMS

ROBERT H. CLELAND, United States District Judge.

*1 Plaintiff Marcus Wrack initiated this action on May 21, 2007, against Defendants City of Detroit and Police Officers Michael Parish and Michael Osman. Before the court is Plaintiff's complaint, which alleges the following counts:

- I) violations of constitutional rights secured by the Fourth Amendment and actionable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983,
- II) unlawful searches under Mich. Comp. Laws § 764.25(b),
- III) assault and battery,
- IV) gross negligence,
- V) intentional infliction of emotional distress and
- VI) violations of Michigan Civil Rights Act under Mich. Comp. Laws § 37.2103.

Only the first count states a claim under federal law; the other five counts allege claims under state law.

As a preliminary matter, the court has original jurisdiction over Plaintiff's section 1983 claim. 28 U.S.C. § 1331. Because Plaintiff's state law claims arise out of the same alleged incidents and share a common nucleus of operative fact, supplemental jurisdiction could be proper. 28 U.S.C. § 1367. However, the court now considers if granting supplemental jurisdiction is in the interest of judicial economy, convenience, fairness and comity. The court determines that it is not, and will therefore dismiss Plaintiff's state law claims.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff's claims arise from events that transpired following routine traffic stops by the individual Defendants of Plaintiff's vehicle, on or about February 9 and 12, 2006. Plaintiff alleges that Defendants Parish and Osman ordered him out of the vehicle and used excessive force in handcuffing and searching Plaintiff without probable cause or reasonable suspicion of criminal activity. (Compl. at ¶¶ 12, 14.) Plaintiff further alleges that, during the course of the traffic stops, either Defendant Osman or Parish performed an unlawful body cavity search of Plaintiff by "inserting a finger into [P]laintiff's anus" without a valid warrant, written authorization or probable cause. (Id. ¶¶ 13-14.)

II. DISCUSSION

A district court has the power to dismiss or remand claims sua sponte for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. See, e.g., Douglas v. E.G. Baldwin & Assocs., 150 F.3d 604, 607 (6th Cir.1998). Claims with original jurisdiction in a district court have either federal question jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331 or diversity jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332. In some circumstances, additional claims alleging violations of only state law may be heard under the supplemental jurisdiction granted pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

In United Mine Workers of America v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 86 S.Ct. 1130, 16 L.Ed.2d 218 (1966), the Supreme Court broadly authorized federal courts to assert jurisdiction over state law claims when there existed a "common nucleus of operative fact" compromising "but one constitutional 'case,'" so long as the

SELECTED TOPICS

Grounds and Subjects of Compensatory Damages

Element of Torts of Intentional Infliction of Severe Emotional Distress

Secondary SourcesCivil liability for insulting or abusive language--modern status

20 A.L.R.4th 773 (Originally published in 1983)

...It is the purpose of this annotation to collect and analyze representative state and federal cases which have considered whether one who causes emotional distress to another by insulting or abusive lan...

§ 33. Requirement of extreme and outrageous conduct in claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress

24 Mich. Civ. Jur. Torts § 33

...To establish the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress, a plaintiff must establish, among other things, extreme and outrageous conduct on the part of the defendant. To satisfy this eleme...

§ 6:7. Intentional Infliction of Mental Distress

2 Michigan Personal Injury Torts § 6:7

...There is no statute concerning the intentional infliction of mental or emotional distress. There is no standard jury instruction applicable to this section. When a person is economically and/or emotion...

See More Secondary SourcesBriefs*Brief of Appellant H. Scott Dalley

2009 WL 6639974

H. Scott DALLEY, Plaintiff-Appellant, v. DYKEMA GOSSETT PLLC, John A. Ferrolli, the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company, Lincoln Financial Advisors Corporation, and Guidance Software, Inc., Defendants-Appellees.
Court of Appeals of Michigan.
May 11, 2009

...The Appellant, H. Scott Dalley ("Dalley"), seeks review from a September 8, 2008 Order and Opinion (Attached as Exhibit 1 - Opinion and Order Granting Summary Disposition), entered by the Honorable Pau...

JOINT APPENDIX, VOL. I

2005 WL 1620385

GIL GARCETTI, FRANK SUNDSTEDT, CAROL NAJERA and COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES, Petitioners, v. RICHARD CEBALLOS, Respondent.
Supreme Court of the United States
May 27, 2005

...FN1. These documents are derived from excerpts of Deposition Transcript of Plaintiff Richard Ceballos in the District Court record at R. 14, 15, 37, and 43. FN2. These documents are derived from excerpt...

Brief Of Washington Legal Foundation as Amicus Curiae Supporting Respondent

2021 WL 4706861

Jane CUMMINGS, Petitioner, v. PREMIER REHAB KELLER, P.L.L.C., Respondent.
Supreme Court of the United States
Oct. 05, 2021

...FN1. No party's counsel authored any part of this brief. No person or entity, other than Washington Legal Foundation and its court had original jurisdiction over at least one claim. Gibbs, 383 U.S. at 725. While this decision granted district courts broad power over pendent state claims, it also recognized discretion in hearing such claims. "[P]endent jurisdiction is a doctrine of discretion, not of plaintiff's right. Its justification lies in considerations of judicial economy, convenience and fairness to litigants; if these are not present a federal court should hesitate to exercise jurisdiction over the state claims" Id. at 726. The Court stated that pendent party jurisdiction may be denied "if the federal claims are dismissed before trial," if "it appears that the state issues substantially predominate," or "if the likelihood of jury confusion" would be strong without separation of the claims. Id. at 726-27.

2 Congress later codified the power of a federal court to hear state claims. 28 U.S.C. § 1367. Similar to the standards articulated in Gibbs, the statute recognizes a federal district court's discretion to decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction if:

- (1) the claim raises a novel or complex issue of State law,
- (2) the claim substantially predominates over the claim or claims over which the district court has original jurisdiction,
- (3) the district court has dismissed all claims over which it has original jurisdiction,
- (4) in exceptional circumstances, there are other compelling reasons for declining jurisdiction.

Id. Subsections two and four apply to this case.

Though section 1367 technically superseded Gibbs, courts agree that "the exercise of discretion ... is still informed by whether remanding the pendent state claims comports with the underlying objective of 'most sensibly accommodating' the values of 'economy, convenience, fairness and comity.'" Executive Software N. Am., Inc. v. U.S. Dist. Court, 24 F.3d 1545, 1557(9th Cir.1994) (citing Carnegie-Mellon Univ. v. Cohill, 484 U.S. 343, 350, 108 S.Ct. 614, 98 L.Ed.2d 720 (1988)).

A. Dismissal Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c)(4)

A district court may deny supplemental jurisdiction pursuant to section 1367\(c\)\(4\) if, "in exceptional circumstances, there are other compelling reasons for declining jurisdiction." 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c)(4) (2006). "Congress's use of the word 'other' to modify 'compelling reasons' indicates that what ought to qualify as 'compelling reasons' for declining jurisdiction under subsection (c) (4) should be of the same nature as the reasons that gave rise to the categories listed in subsections (c)(1)-(3)." Executive Software, 24 F.3d at 1557. Once the court decides that there are compelling reasons to decline jurisdiction, the factors that inform this decision usually will demonstrate how the circumstances confronted are "exceptional." Id. at 1558.

1. "Compelling Reasons" for Dismissing Plaintiff's State Law Claims

Courts generally accept that "compelling reasons for the purposes of [\[§ 1367\]\(c\)\(4\)](#) ... should be those that lead a court to conclude that declining jurisdiction best accommodates the values of economy, convenience, fairness and comity." Id. at 1557 (internal citations omitted); see also Palmer v. Hosp. Auth. of Randolph County, 22 F.3d 1559, 1569 (11th Cir.1994). When deciding whether to agree or decline to exercise jurisdiction over supplemental state claims, the court considers the circumstances of the particular case, the nature of the state law claims, the character of the governing state law, and the relationship between the state and federal claims (including the possibility of jury confusion).

Litigation in federal court that mixes federal law claims with supplemental state law claims can cause procedural and substantive problems; in the interests of judicial economy and convenience, these problems should be avoided. See Executive Software, 24 F.3d at 1557. Even where, as in the present case, the federal and state claims arise out of the same factual background, the simultaneous litigation of such claims may prolong pre-trial practice, complicate the trial, lengthen and make more complex the jury instructions leading to potential confusion of the jury, result in inconsistent verdicts, and cause post-trial problems with respect to judgment interest and the availability of prevailing party attorney fees. Consequently, the apparent judicial economy and convenience to the parties of a court exercising supplemental jurisdiction over state claims may be substantially offset by problems simultaneously created. The court will review the federal and state claims in some detail to determine if supplemental jurisdiction should be exercised over the state claims.

a. Applicable Legal Standards

3 Plaintiff's state law claims would substantially expand the scope of this case beyond that necessary and relevant to the federal claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. First, the federal standard for evaluating whether unlawful or excessive force was used by police officers is an objective one: "the question is whether the officers' actions are 'objectively reasonable' in light of the facts and circumstances confronting them, without regard to their underlying intent or motivation." Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 397, 109 S.Ct. 1865, 104 L.Ed.2d 443 (1989) (internal citations omitted); see also Saucier v. Katz, 533 U.S. 194, 210, 121 S.Ct. 2151, 150 L.Ed.2d 272 (2001).

Plaintiff's equivalent state law claims, on the other hand, focus almost entirely on the officers' subjective mental state. Under Michigan law, assault and battery, gross negligence, and intentional infliction of emotional distress are all intentional torts. See Young v. Morrall, 359 Mich. 180, 101 N.W.2d 358, 362 (Mich.1960); Sudul v. City of Hamtramck, 221 Mich.App. 455, 562 N.W.2d 478, 479 (Mich.Ct.App.1997). As such, the question of intent and/or willfulness is the central element of each claim, and the focus is on the mental state counsel, paid for the brief preparation or submission. All parties consent...

See More Briefs

Trial Court Documents

Glenn v. Carmona

2007 WL 6143878
Duane GLENN, Plaintiff, v. Daniel CARMONA, Defendant; Daniel Carmona, Counter-Plaintiff and Third-Party Plaintiff, v. Duane Glenn and Victoria Shaw, Counter Defendant and Third Party Defendant.
Circuit Court of Michigan.
Jan. 10, 2007

...At a session of said Court, held in the City of Detroit, County of Wayne State of Michigan on JAN 10 2007 PRESENT: Hon. Isidore B. Torres Circuit Court Judge Pending before the Court are Daniel Carmona...

Mikho v. Ricks and Associates, PLLC

2018 WL 7457909
Huda Saleem MIKHO, Plaintiff, v. RICKS AND ASSOCIATES, PLLC, a Michigan professional limited liability company and Lori Bobbit Waddles, individually, Defendants.
Circuit Court of Michigan.
Dec. 03, 2018

...At a session of said Court held in the Courthouse in Pontiac, Oakland County, Michigan on 12/3/18 PRESENT: LEO BOWMAN, Circuit Judge This matter is before the Court after presiding over a bench trial a...

Macomb Family Care, P.C. v. Dawn Burke Family Care, PLLC

2007 WL 8119423
MACOMB FAMILY CARE, P.C., a Michigan Professional Corporation, and James J. Faremouth, Jr., D.O., Plaintiffs/Counter Defendants, v. DAWN BURKE FAMILY CARE, PLLC, a Michigan Professional Limited Liability Company, Dawn Burke, and Deniece Tyrell, Defendants/Counter Plaintiffs.
Circuit Court of Michigan.
Apr. 25, 2007

...Defendants Dawn Burke Family Care, PLLC, and Dawn Burke move for summary disposition and for sanctions. Plaintiffs filed their complaint on December 29, 2005, and a first amended complaint on May 1, 20...

See More Trial Court Documents

of the alleged wrongdoer to determine if he acted intentionally, arbitrarily or maliciously. Young, 101 N.W.2d at 362.

Exercising supplemental jurisdiction over the state law claims would require additional testimony, evidence and a probing into the defendant officers' alleged mental state at the time of the alleged assault. Additionally, the state law claims would require a jury to understand, distinguish, and apply two distinct standards of reasonableness in the same case. This would result in more lengthy jury instructions, the potential for jury confusion and inconvenience to the parties and the court that would not be present if the claims were tried separately.

b. Available Defenses

The nature and use of available defenses also differs considerably in Plaintiff's state and federal claims. Because even deadly force is constitutionally permissible under some circumstances (see, e.g., Tennessee v. Garner, 471 U.S. 1, 105 S.Ct. 1694, 85 L.Ed.2d 1 (1985)), proof of Defendant's use of force alone will not satisfy Plaintiff's federal claim. Miller v. Taylor, 877 F.2d 469, 472 (6th Cir.1989). Instead, to succeed under section 1983, "Plaintiff [must] show that [the Officer's] use of force was unjustified in order to state a constitutional deprivation." Id. Such is not the case for Plaintiff's state law claims. Instead, proof of force plus subjective intent will shift the burden to each Defendant to justify such force as reasonable and necessary under the affirmative defenses of self-defense or defense of others. Id.; see also Ealey v. Detroit, 144 Mich.App. 324, 375 N.W.2d 435, 437 (Mich.Ct.App.1985). This shifting burden, coupled with the different application of defenses to different claims at different stages, raises the probability of jury confusion and inefficiency.

c. Immunity

Plaintiff's state and federal law claims also entail different versions of immunity, a further complication. Under federal law, "government officials performing discretionary functions generally are granted a qualified immunity and are 'shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known.'" Wilson v. Layne, 526 U.S. 603, 609, 119 S.Ct. 1692, 143 L.Ed.2d 818 (1999) (citing Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818, 102 S.Ct. 2727, 73 L.Ed.2d 396 (1982)). In determining if a government official is entitled to such qualified immunity, a court must first determine if a federal right was violated and, if so, whether that right was "so clearly established that a reasonable official would understand that his particular conduct would violate that right." Wilkins v. City of Royal Oak, No. 04-73276, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42474, at * 26 (E.D.Mich. Aug. 17, 2005). A court must also determine if the officer was performing a discretionary function at the time. Id. This immunity is relatively straightforward and turns on the objective reasonableness of the official's actions. See generally Harlow, 457 U.S. 800, 102 S.Ct. 2727, 73 L.Ed.2d 396.

*4 Immunity under state law is remarkably different, as it applies a subjective standard of review to the official's actions. Unlike federal qualified immunity, officers facing claims of intentional torts "are not shielded by [Michigan's] governmental immunity statute." Sudul, 562 N.W.2d at 479; see Mich. Comp. Laws § 691.1407(3). Unlike the immunity applicable to section 1983 claims, immunity from state torts under Michigan law depends upon an officer's subjective intent at the time of the alleged assault. And, to further complicate the matter, application of this immunity is not a straightforward process:

Governmental immunity [under Michigan law] has been, at best, a confusing area of the law for the bench and bar of our state for many years and, unfortunately, attempts to explain it have often resulted in increasing the quagmire in which we collectively have found ourselves on this subject.

Sudul, 562 N.W.2d at 490 (Murphy, J., dissenting). The differences in the applicability of governmental immunity between Plaintiff's federal and state claims, as well as the "quagmire" that has evolved regarding the application of such immunity to state claims under Michigan law, are additional factors that would complicate the simultaneous trial of federal claims, confuse the jury and inconvenience the parties and the court.

d. Vicarious Liability

Another area of conflict between the federal and state claims involves the question of vicarious liability. The law of municipal liability under section 1983 is governed by Monell v. Department of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611 (1978), and its progeny. Under this line of cases, "the doctrine of respondeat superior is not a basis for rendering municipalities liable under § 1983 for the constitutional torts of their employees." Monell, 436 U.S. 658, 662 n. 7, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611. Rather, municipal liability depends upon whether "someone in a supervisory capacity ... at least implicitly authorized, approved, or knowingly acquiesced in the unconstitutional conduct of the offending employee." Sudul, 562 N.W.2d at 482.

In Michigan, the law of municipal liability is markedly different. Unlike federal municipal liability, which examines whether the municipality authorized or acquiesced in the alleged conduct, state liability is precluded by the immunity statute, which states, "a governmental agency is immune from tort liability if the agency is engaged in the exercise or discharge of a governmental function." Mich. Comp. Laws § 691.1407(1). Under the statute, a municipality can only be held liable "with respect to providing medical care or treatment to a patient." Mich. Comp. Laws § 691.1407(4).

Under the Michigan statute, municipalities enjoy broad immunity, and there is no question regarding authorization or acquiescence. As such, a municipality could be held liable only under the federal claim. This dichotomy would likely confuse the jury, and could reasonably lead to a verdict that exonerates the governmental agency from section 1983 liability simply because it cannot be liable for the state tort actions. Such a result would be contrary to the interests of justice.

e. Recoverable Damages

5 Recoverable damages are drastically different for Plaintiff's federal and state claims. Under federal law, a successful section 1983 Plaintiff may recover punitive damages against individual defendants. See City of Newport v. Fact Concerts, Inc., 453 U.S. 247, 101 S.Ct. 2748, 69 L.Ed.2d 616 (1981). In direct contrast, "[i]n Michigan, the courts ... refuse to allow the recovery of punitive damages." Fellows v. Superior Prods. Co., 201 Mich.App. 155, 506 N.W.2d 534, 536 (Mich.Ct.App.1993) (quoting In re Disaster at Detroit Metro. Airport, 750 F.Supp. 793, 805 (E.D.Mich.1989)). As a result, Plaintiff would be entitled to seek punitive damages against the officers for his section 1983 claims but not for the remainder of his claims.

Punitive damages, by definition, "are not intended to compensate the injured party, but rather to punish the tortfeasor." City of Newport, 453 U.S. at 266. The jury would be instructed that they are permitted to "punish" for an egregious Fourth Amendment excessive force violation but that they are not so permitted for even an egregious violation of state laws of assault and battery, gross negligence or intentional infliction of emotional distress. This difference could easily lead to an artificially-and unfairly-high award for a proven section 1983 claim in order to "compensate" for the jury's inability to award punitive damages for the state law claims. It could also result in an unfairly low award if the jury were to incorrectly conclude that, since Michigan law does not permit punitive damages, the proven federal claim is not deserving of such an award either. In either scenario, the different treatment of punitive damages under state and federal law could result in jury confusion, lengthy jury instructions and an unfair verdict.

f. Compelling Reasons Exist to Dismiss Plaintiff's State Claims

The potential for jury confusion is a compelling reason for a district court to decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction. Gibbs, 383 U.S. at 727; Barbetta v. Chemlawn Services Corp., 669 F.Supp. 569, 571 (W.D.N.Y.1987); Gasque v. King, No. 2:90CV00470, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19260, at *5-6 (M.D.N.C. Oct. 4, 1991); Padilla v. City of Saginaw, 867 F.Supp. 1309, 1315 (E.D.Mich.1994); Blue Dane Simmental Corp. v. American Simmental Ass'n, 952 F.Supp. 1399, 1404 (D.Neb.1997); see also Charles A. Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice & Procedure § 3567.1, n. 46. (2d ed.1984). In considering this potential, as well as the interests of economy, convenience, fairness and comity, the court finds that the state claims should be dismissed. To exercise supplemental jurisdiction over these claims would result in confusion, inconvenience and potentially unfair results given the systematic disparity between these claims, including their various legal standards, available defenses, potential immunity from suit, potential vicarious liability and potentially recoverable damages. Therefore, the court will dismiss without prejudice the state law claims of assault and battery, gross negligence, intentional infliction of emotional distress and violations of Mich. Comp. Laws §§ 37.2103 and 764.25\(b\).

2. This Case Presents "Exceptional Circumstances"

6 Courts must ensure that the reasons for declining to exercise supplemental jurisdiction identified as "compelling" are not deployed in circumstances that are not "exceptional." Executive Software, 24 F.3d at 1558. Courts agree that the inclusion of the phrase "exceptional circumstances" limits the broad discretion that district courts once entertained under Gibbs to deny supplemental jurisdiction in any case. See, e.g., Itar-Tass Russian News Agency v. Russian Kurier, Inc., 140 F.3d 442, 448 (2d Cir.1998); Executive Software, 24 F.3d at 1558. However, Congress only "sounded a note of caution" and did not restrict a district court's ability to dismiss claims only in cases that were "ridiculous" or "impractical." Executive Software, 24 F.3d at 1558, 1560 (citing Hays County Guardian v. Supple, 969 F.2d 111 (5th Cir.1992) (holding that exceptional circumstances were present when parallel state proceedings were underway and therefore the adjudication of state claims would be a "waste of judicial resources.")).

The court finds, in weighing the likelihood of jury confusion, judicial inefficiency, substantial inconvenience to the parties and potential unfairness in outcome, which could readily result by attempting to resolve all claims in a single trial, that exceptional circumstances are present in this case. Though there would be some duplication of effort required by Plaintiff and Defendants in this case if Plaintiff decides to pursue both claims in separate fora, the court finds that any advantages gained by trying all claims together are outweighed by the potential for confusion of the issues, legal theories, defenses and possible relief. Thus, the court will not exercise supplemental jurisdiction and will dismiss without prejudice all state law claims.

B. Dismissal Pursuant to § 1367\(c\)\(2\)

Separately, a district court may decline to exercise of supplemental jurisdiction pursuant to section 1367\(c\)\(2\) if "the [state] claim substantially predominates over the claim or claims over which the district court has original jurisdiction." 28 U.S.C. § 1367\(c\)\(4\). As already discussed in detail, the state claims presented here implicate myriad problems, including the need to introduce evidence inapplicable to-indeed inconsistent with-the evidence relevant to the federal claim, additional witnesses, disparate legal theories on both claims and defenses and significantly expanded and contradictory jury instructions. The court finds that the state claims presented in this case would, for these reasons, predominate over the section 1983 federal claim over which the court has original jurisdiction. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367\(c\)\(2\), the court will not exercise supplemental jurisdiction and will dismiss without prejudice all state law claims.

In sum, Plaintiff's state law claims for assault and battery, gross negligence, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and violations of Mich. Comp. Laws §§ 37.2103 and 764.25(b) do not have original jurisdiction in federal court. The inclusion of Plaintiff's state claims with Plaintiff's claim for deprivation of civil rights pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 could lead to jury confusion, judicial inefficiency, inconvenience to the parties and an unfair outcome. Additionally, these claims would predominate over Plaintiff's section 1983 federal claim. Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1367(c)(2) and (4), the court in its discretion will decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over Plaintiff's state law claims. Accordingly,

III. CONCLUSION

*7 IT IS ORDERED that all of Plaintiff's state law claims including, without limitation, violation of Mich. Comp. Laws § 764.25(b) (Count II), assault and battery (Count III), gross negligence (Count IV), intentional infliction of emotional distress (Count V), and violation of Mich. Comp. Laws § 37.2103, are hereby DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that only Plaintiff's claim arising under federal law, 42 U.S.C. § 1983 (Count I) now remains before this court.

All Citations

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2007 WL 2121995

End of Document

© 2023 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.